Food Shopper

Market News Service

We all have a tendency to be creatures of habit following set patterns in life. For example, do you follow a certain routine when you do your food shopping? Or, have you learned to implement new budge saving ideas?

It's time to get out of that shopping rut and tight inflation. The fighting will probably begin at the meat counter, the source that adds the most to the food budget. It's time to learn to purchase other good sources of protein in addition to meat.

At present prices consumers are purchasing ground beef in the range of $1.17 - 1.39 lb. There is an excellent alternative which sells for approximately 60c per lb. at present retail prices. That high quality, "good-for-you" food item is eggs. The versatile protein food which can be served at breakfast, lunch, dinner or between meal snacks.

A creature of habit would pick up a carton of eggs automatically as she goes by the display. In her mind those eggs are catalogued under breakfast and baking needs. Don't stop there, use eggs for delicious main meal souffles, casseroles and salads, between meal snacks or to stretch meal leftovers. Eggs are as versatile as you want to make them.

Eggs are taken for granted so perhaps some "egg-education" would help clear up some of the fallacies that follow eggs from the grocery store to your home.

For your copy of some unique recipes using eggs please write to: Mrs. Virginia Duesberry, Va. Dept. of Agriculture and Commerce, 203 N. Governor St., Richmond, VA 23219.
